"Hempstead county has the largest county farm bureau in the state and one of the largest in the South, and our farm people from all over Arkansas plan to attend the big celebration to honor this county organization on its achievement," H. H. Huskey, president of the Hempstead organization, said. Plans are being made for from 7,000 to 10,000 visitors at the meeting, which will be held in the beautiful outdoor amphitheatre at the Branch Experiment Station.

The program has been completed and will start promptly at 10 a. m. The chief speaker, Edward O'Neal, will deliver his address at 1:15 in the afternoon. He will discuss both national and state matters affecting agriculture. Just previous to his talk, C. C. Randall, assistant director of the agricultural extension service of this state, will discuss "The College of Agriculture and Farm Organizations."

The morning session will include songs by the Sam McCollum Columbia County Quartet, as well as other entertainment features.

R. E. Short, president of the Arkansas Farm Bureau Federation, at 10:30 will discuss the program of the farm bureau in this state. H. S. Mobley, president of the Washington County Farm Bureau, will discuss a typical county farm bureau program.

"We are assured that the meeting will be over before 3 o'clock, so that our farm people can start for home in plenty of time to make the trip in one day," Mr. Huskey added. Various civic and church groups will serve lunch on the grounds at a nominal price.

George Raft, Film Star, Visits Spa

First Time for Movie Idol to Pay Visit to Hot Springs

HOT SPRINGS, Ark.—While he is not adverse to starring in pictures of the gangster type, because they have been profitable and because they prove that "crime doesn't pay," George Raft, motion picture actor, said Monday that he was pleased at the number of starring roles in which he will be featured, because of the marked difference in type, characters and general versatility.

The movie celebrity came here to fulfill a promise to his friend, Owen Madden, to visit Hot Springs and take a course of the world famous mineral baths, which, he said, "Madden has been telling me about every time he sees me and in every letter he writes." Raft was accompanied by his secretary, Mack Gray, and Phil Kramer of Chicago. This is the first visit of Raft and Kramer to Hot Springs.

Japs Move Fast for Hankow Drive

Capture Hukow, Destroy
Chinese Air Fleet, in 70-Mile March

SHANGHAI, China.—(AP)—Japanese military authorities announced Tuesday the capture of Hukow by Japan's Yangtze river forces, hammering toward Hankow, the capital in the heart of China.

The fall of Hukow, one of the principal barriers to Hankow, brought the Japanese invaders within 100 miles of the capital and only 100 miles north of Nanchang, China's major air base, where Japanese reported a death blow to the Chinese air force with destruction of 51 planes by aerial raiders.

Once the Japanese pierced Hukow's outer defenses, military officials said the city's capitulation was almost bloodless, with Chinese withdrawing leaving quantities of munitions.

Japanese forces have advanced 70 miles up the nine-stemmed Yangtze, where tanks were heavily defeated by concrete pill-boxes since the fall of Anking 21 days ago.

In addition to piercing a protective boom of rock-laden junks, sunk by the Chinese at Matowchen, the Japanese said they took 207 miles from the river to make way for their sweep inland.

The majority of the Japanese river fleet is still below the barrier which lies 25 miles downstream from Hukow.

Japanese reported capture of one howitzer, four field guns, two anti-aircraft, and much ammunition at Hukow.

Possession of Hukow gives the invaders a base from which to launch an offensive across Lake Poyang against Nanchang and an overland drive to attempt cutting the Canton-Hankow railway, China's vital supply line.

Judge Rider Holds County Court at New County-Seat

New Structure

The first session of county court to be held in Hope since the city's victory over Washington in the county-seat removal campaign June 11 occurred at 1:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon.

County Judge Frank Rider had issued his formal order declaring the county-seat moved, on Monday, and then recessed court until 1:30 Tuesday afternoon. The Washington adherents had asked for an appeal to circuit court, and the appeal was granted.

Washington's appeal took the form of a request for an injunction, to restrain the county judge from transferring court activities to Hope. The appeal was heard by Circuit Judge Dexter Bush Tuesday morning at Prescott, where the circuit court is in session. Judge Bush refused to grant the injunction; he permitted court sessions to be held at Hope, but advised that the permanent records must remain at Washington until new permanent quarters are found in Hope—which coincided with the earlier order of County Judge Rider.

The first actual business to come before Judge Rider at this first Hope session of the county court was the approving of a claim due John S. Gibson, veteran Hope druggist and himself the son of a famous Hempstead county judge, the late A. A. Gibson, Sr.

In announcing his court-seat removal order Judge Rider also named the commission which will supervise the building of Hempstead's new courthouse in Hope. The commissioners are the president of the county's three banks:

R. M. LaGrone, Sr., president Citizens National of Hope; Lloyd Spencer, president First National of Hope; and H. H. Stephens, president of the Bank of Blevins, at Blevins.

The commissioners selected McAnish & Anderson, of Little Rock, as architects.

General Exhibit Building at Fair Park to Be Remodeled

The Executive Committee of the Hempstead County Fair met at the Chamber of Commerce Saturday, July 2, and the committees reported, indicated the Fair Catalog would be ready for publication by the 15 of July.

The Band Mothers' club, who have undertaken the selling of the advertising of the fair catalog, reported that $450 worth of advertising had been sold and they expected to increase this amount by another $100.

The grounds committee reported that a WPA project had been submitted to Wayne Fletcher, Area Supervisor, for a project to repair and remodel the general exhibit building, the poultry exhibit building, which is now being used for a testing station, and the two livestock buildings, also to install water hydrants, toilets, drinking fountains, and additional space in the general office building for emergency hospital facilities.

The committee plans to tear down the two livestock buildings now at the park and use the material in these two buildings for a new and larger livestock building, as the present buildings are too small and unsuited to the purpose of properly displaying livestock.

The secretary and treasurer reported $197.75 on hand, which has contributed by the merchants of Hope. This sum represents the amount left from the Trade Day Program. The following merchants contributed $5.55 each, making a total of $197.75:

J. C. Penney Company, Feeders' Supply Co., Archer's Service Station, Hempstead County Lumber Co., Crescent Drug Store, Hobbs' Grocery, Kroger's Grocery, A&P Grocery, Morgan & Lindsey, "M" System, Gorman & Gosnell, Haynes Brothers, A. D. Mid-

Frivolity—A Symptom of Basic Well-Being

EVERY time hot weather comes on, and the American indulges himself in his incurable interest in all of the active and passive sports, someone is sure to complain that this simply proves how very frivolous, low-brow, and generally light-minded we all are.

A prize fight draws a million-dollar gate, two hot big league pennant races set whole cities half delirious, golf courses and bathing beaches do a land-office business, swing music festivals draw enormous crowds, motorists set out on their annual pilgrims to cool breezes and inspiring scenery—and someone is certain to pipe up that we are a heedless folk fiddling while Rome burns.

Now it is quite true that dire events are taking shape in this world, and that a man seriously given to worry could sit down and find food for steady, uninterrupted pessimism for weeks on end.

Yet this very frivolity of ours is probably one of the most encouraging symptoms we could possibly display right now.

OBVIOUSLY, a nation which can suspend all its other business for a couple of days to wonder which of two prize fighters will beat the other one is not a nation which is living under the shadow of immediate disaster. A city which can go haywire over its ball team is still enjoying pretty robust health. And a country which can send its citizens out to spend $4,000,000,000 on the vacation highways is a long way from collapse.

We have our troubles, they're big ones, and we're going to be a long time solving them.

But the basic fact, underneath them all, is that we are the luckiest people in all the world today.

OUR economic system is in bad shape—but it has more of the elements needed to restore it to complete health than any other system on earth.

We have much unrest and dissatisfaction among our people—but we have less than any other great nation, and we have a better chance to cure what we do have.

We face the danger of a world war—but if any nation can stay out of that war, we can, and no nation can be as confident of ultimate victory if war should come in spite of everything.

It doesn't hurt to remind ourselves of these things. They simply mean that although things are bad, they could be ever so much worse—and that they are probably going to get better faster than we sometimes suppose.

A Couple of Reminders

IF a large amount of publicity had been given to the recent Atlantic City convention of the Industrial Research Institute, there'd probably have been considerable mind-changing going on about two convictions of long standing in this country.

The principal speaker at the convention's opening session was Maurice Holland, nationally known industrial research director. Holland stated frankly that both Germany and Russia were doing a vastly greater amount of valuable research in industry and business than the United States. "We want to increase the productivity," he said of this country's research body, "by giving national direction to their efforts."

It was agreed at the convention that there was a need here for "patient money—money willing to wait a long time for returns." Delegates to the convention were representatives of a number of the country's greatest businesses.

It seems that (Correction No. 1) there are actually other countries that are doing some things better than we. And it seems that (Correction No. 2) business is not the arch-enemy of everything savoring of long-range planning.

Business' disagreement with many political long-range plans has resulted in an unjust conception of the business man as a congenitally short-sighted muddler-through. But business does its own long-range planning.

The Family Doctor

Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine.

In Order to Relieve Suffering the Doctor Must Know Its Cause

Nowadays we have learned much about the detection of disease in the human being by using various tests and mechanical methods of examination. Many people have come to believe that disease can be diagnosed without even having the patient anywhere near the doctor who examined him. This is, of course, an error.

The doctor must determine, first of all, the cause of the pain or of the suffering. Sometimes it is the result of an infectious disease. Perhaps germs coming into the human body have attacked the tissues and as a result of their attack have broken down the human tissue, resulting in disorders of function and subsequent distress.

Sometimes various chemical substances coming into the body cause it to be attacked with inflammation or irritation and as a result produce suffering and pain. In still other instances the human being may be sensitive to certain foods or drugs, and as a result of this sensitization he is disturbed in his functions that pain inevitably follows.

We must recognize that the human being is a combination of mind and body. This combination of a mind capable of reacting to external circumstances is one of the chief marks of a human being. All of us know that it is quite possible for a human being to suffer as much as the result of a disturbance of his emotions as it is for him to suffer as the result of an actual distended abdomen or as the result of an inflammation of the tissues in his arm or in his leg.

Regardless of the physical character of any illness from which a human being may suffer, his emotional reactions are of the greatest importance. The emotional factor must be considered by the doctor in every illness.

Some people are so disturbed by the slightest pain that symptoms are exaggerated to a point which makes even the doctor doubtful about the nature of the disease. Other people are so stoical and so completely free from fear of any kind that they tend to minimize greatly symptoms which may be of the utmost importance in diagnosing a disease.

Unless the doctor has a thorough understanding of the mental reactions of the patient, it is difficult for him to make a certain diagnosis. Simply for this reason it is important to know that there must be a personal relationship between doctor and patient in order to secure the best possible results in medical practice.

(This is the first of two articles in which Dr. Fishbein describes the processes of the lungs.)

When we breathe, oxygen in the air is taken into the lungs, and barbon dioxide, with some additional moisture, is breathed out. Ancient authorities did not understand the function of the lungs. They thought the purpose of this movement was to keep the flame of life cooled and regulated. They also thought that the purpose of breathing was to generate vital spirits in the body.

The lungs are constructed much like a sponge. Small spaces are surrounded by the tissues which contain tiny blood vessels. When air is breathed, it comes into these spaces, and from the air the tiny blood vessels take up oxygen. In the same manner, when we exhale, the carbon dioxide passes out of the blood and into the tiny air spaces. From these tiny air spaces it goes into the larger tubes, known as the bronchial tubes into the trachea or windpipe.

The amount of space through which we breathe and pass oxygen is really tremendous. It has been estimated that the walls of these tiny air spaces, if laid out flat, would make an area from 70 to 90 square yards.

It has also been estimated that these air spaces take up oxygen at the rate of almost four quarts a minute. We do not always breathe at the same rate.

When we are breathing normally during sleep, we may breathe from 12 to 15 times per minute. We breathe more rapidly if we are standing up than when we are lying down. We breathe more rapidly if we are exercising than when we are at rest. If we are very much excited we also breathe more rapidly.

In order to determine just how fast we breathe on any occasion, it is necessary to hold a watch and to count exactly how many times we breathe in each minute.

Harvard received gifts of $4,776,386 during the past year.

JOE WEASEL—hero; he thought he was on top of the world until he snatched out KILLY ARCHER—heroine; she thought she was headed for the altar until she snatched out ED, the WEASEL—gangster; he thought he was headed somewhere, too, but affairs somehow got mixed up.

Yesterday Joe and the Weasel inform Kelly she is kidnapped as they arrive at the gangster's hide-out. Then they open up to admit the Weasel and Joe and Kelly.

CHAPTER XI

A BOLT slid and a key turned. The door opened a crack. An automatic held in a slim hand shot out. And the eyes of Cissy, coming around the door, peered cautiously into the night. Then, seeing that it was indeed the Weasel, she evidently holding dominion over two unknowns, she flung the door wide and stood arms akimbo, the gun still held in her right hand.

"So you've got tangled up with a redhead, have you?" she said to the Weasel.

The Weasel made a depreciatory gesture. "You don't understand, babe. Dis-dis is bizness." Then he told her of his trip.

"Well, that wins the hat," she said.

"Huh?" "I said when they dealt out the brains, you drew a bust hand. Here you've got a rod on this guy"—she gestured at Joe—"and you're going to cut him in fifty-fifty. Some snatcher, you turned out to be, Weasel."

The Weasel shifted uncomfortably. "Well, I give him my word."

Cissy laughed harshly. "He can have that. You give it to me all the time and it ain't worth a dime. Listen, stupid, I'm handing this out for anybody but you and me. Get it?"

A what-can-I-do expression decorated the Weasel's face as he looked at Joe.

"Geez, pal," he said, "I'm sorry." Joe waved his hand. Never before had he dismissed half of a hundred thousand dollar ransom so airily.

"Skip it," he said. "You can't help it. You're in a spot. But I think your—er—girl friend might be a little more generous. What with the money you'll get out of this snatch and the twenty grand you lifted from that bank, you . . ."

He was interrupted by a shrill squeal from Cissy, a squeal of pure wrath. He looked at her. She was advancing on the Weasel sinuously, like a kind of blond cobra. "So?" she hissed. "Holding out on me, eh? What's all this about twenty thousand and a bank?"

"I stuck up a bank," he broke down and confessed. Cissy's eyes narrowed. "Oh, you did, did you? And you wasn't going to tell me? All right, you big tramp. Hand over half of it and hand it quick."

Shamefacedly the Weasel pulled out his ill-gotten gains and counted off ten $1000 bills. "Geez," he said, "dat's a moll for you, ain't it? A hard-voikin' guy like me don't get no place."

Cissy swooped up the money as swoops the eagle upon the lamb. "That's the way us Chicago girls do," she said complacently.

AT that precise moment in the world's history the setup in the little kitchen was as follows: Kelly Archer sat on the table, her legs crossed; Mr. Joseph Herodenden Sandham was draped around a straight-backed chair and the chair was tilted back against the wall; Mr. Ed (Weasel) Weynowski stood discomfited in the middle of the floor clutching what remained of his loot; and the blond Cissy was busily depositing ten thousand dollars in the top of her stocking. For the first time since the party had entered the house the Weasel and Cissy were slightly off guard. It was the psychological moment for the Assyrian to descend like the wolf on the fold. The Assyrian did.

There was a sudden crash of glass. A stentorian voice shouted: "Don't move, any of you. You're covered." At the same instant came a loud banging on the kitchen door.

Cissy made one dramatic attempt to give battle. She whirled like a tiger and, shooting from the hip, shot out the light. It was a futile gesture. Instantly the beam of a powerful electric torch lit up the room. The glare took Cissy between the eyes, blinding her momentarily.

"Drop that gun," rapped out the authoritative voice from the window.

Cissy dropped it. The banging on the door ended when one of the panels crashed in. A hand came through and turned the key from the inside. A second later the place was blue with police officers.

Ed the Weasel, standing stupidly in the middle of the floor, found himself seized and handcuffed expertly to the blond Cissy. The policemen hustled them into the living-room of the cottage. Kelly and Joe were escorted in rather than hustled. Lights went up. "Not hurt, are you?" the officer in charge asked Kelly. "They treat you all right?" "Perfect hosts," Kelly assured him. "I've had a lovely evening."

ED the Weasel gestured at Joe with his manacled hands. "Hey," he said, "why'n't you put da bracelets on him? He wuz in on dis wid me."

"Yeah," said the officer. "That's what you think." He turned to Joe. "You're Sandham, aren't you?"

"The last of the Sandhams," Joe corrected.

"Well," said the cop, "you used your head. And I'll tell you something more. There's a reward out for that Connecticut bank robber. You'll get some of it."

"Is that right?" said Joe. "Well, I could use it about now."

"Lissen," began the Weasel, "I don't git dis. He . . ."

"Shut up," said the officer. "It's enough for you to know that Sandham got word to us. How, it doesn't matter. Here you"—he pointed to one of his subordinates—"take these two out of here."

At that precise moment four people swept into the room. A dignified elderly lady was in the lead. A dignified elderly man ran her a close second. The black-eyed girl from the refreshment stand was in third place. And lastly, a short, petulant-looking individual with slicked-down hair and a waxed mustache.

Kelly taped them off as they came in. "Mother! Father! The hot ones girl! Gilbert!"

"Mother! Father! My date for Saturday night! The eminent archeologist, no doubt!" Joe murmured after her.

Mrs. Archer swept Kelly into her arms. Joe, standing to one side, stared disinterestedly, jargon and incoherence.

"Oh, my darling . . . Your father and I have been nearly crazy . . . police got in touch with us . . . Are you sure you're all right?" . . . Phoned Gilbert . . . Darling, weren't you simply terrified? . . . Flew to Buffalo this afternoon . . . Why did you ever do it? . . . Here by car . . . Gilbert flew down from Boston and insisted on coming with us . . . My dear, who was the young man who . . ."

This and more of the same. Between Mrs. Archer's gasps for breath, Kelly managed: "Mother, do stop. I'm perfectly all right."

"May I," Mr. Archer asked of his wife, "get the floor long enough to kiss my erring daughter?"

Kelly broke from her father's embrace to interrogate the wax-mustached Gilbert.

"Well, Gil," she said, "aren't you going to speak to me?"

"Hello," said Gilbert, without grace. He seemed mad about something.

RAISING A FAMILY

By Olive Roberts Barton

Child Needs A Sense of Having Roots Somewhere

Children are hurt more deeply and sincerely through their loyalties than most people guess.

Their pride and loyalty to their parents is part of them. In fact, they often improvise a false pedestal for father or mother, after one or the other has shattered faith, so as to keep this loyalty intact.

In plain words, when father's nature is cold, they pitifully try to make him warm and human. If he gets drunk, they hide the fact as much as they can to themselves and others. If mother is habitually unkind or otherwise shiftless, they try as hard as they can to picture her as she is on special occasions. They hang on to their ideals and thus protect their loyalties.

Listen to children brag. "My pop can lick your's any day." "My father knows more than anybody alive." "My mother says blue is the prettiest color and she knows." "My mother makes the best ice cream in this town." "My father and mother read the Excelsior paper so your old paper is no good." My father this. My mother that. These are our children.

Loyalty to Old Things
But I am not writing today on parents making an effort to keep alive the ideals of their children. It should be so but our subject at the moment deals more with the moral side of loyalty and the child himself.

Loyalty, in this sense, means sticking to the friends who have a right to count on our friendship, come rain or shine. It means the child must also be loyal to a place. If he cannot find his affections to the community that bore him, providing it has contributed to his growth and development, then he lacks loyalty.

This does not block out "change." It does mean, however, that appreciation and a kindness of memory should be a part of him.

Today we are teaching internationalism. I hear parents say that this conflicts with preference for country, or what we call patriotism or nationalism.

Co-operation Not Out
There must always be first loyalties. Family at home comes before the family next door. Neighborhood before the suburb across the ravine. Town before the town next on the schedule. State before the sister-state across the line. Country before the rest of the world. There must be some fixity or there is nothing.

This does not mean that co-operation and sympathy are out of order. Quite the opposite. The loyal family man will be the good neighbor and be interested and active in the place where his family lives. He can blend loyally with broad interest.

Children should learn that loyalties are not cramping but inspiring. Roots are necessary to generous blooming.

Children should learn that loyalties are not cramping but inspiring. Roots are necessary to generous blooming.

It may be significant that most of the actress' admirers, well-wishers and interpreters seem to be people who have worked on or in her pictures. George Cukor, for example, who directed her in four films, made numerous observations the other day which I believe contribute something toward an understanding of the most unpredictable personality in Hollywood.

It's an Old, Old Family Tradition
Of her background, Cukor said: "She comes from aggressive people."

Her mother was a suffragette, and really militant. Her father, a famous surgeon, didn't coddle her. I remember once when she was reminiscing, she said "Every time I'd get fresh at the dinner table, father would reach over and slap me and would go right on with his conversation as casually as if he had just swatted a fly."

"And once her father remarked that his family wouldn't attend a wedding or a funeral unless it could be the bride or the corpse."

Cukor pointed out that Miss Hepburn is an aggressive actress. She doesn't woo an audience; she tries to force it to like her, or at least to believe her. She has made some foolish mistakes in her relations with fans and reporters, the director believes, but her attitude also has been misinterpreted. It seems that, all along, Miss Hepburn has tried to be funny. "The press never met anyone quite like her, and it has taken her too seriously," Cukor said. "She has tried to handle some of these situations amusingly, but they have gone sour."

Some Flowers From Fay Bainter
Another of The Friends of Katie Hepburn is an actress of infinitely more theatrical distinction than herself—Fay Bainter. The other day at lunch Miss Bainter flabbergasted me by characterizing Miss Hepburn as "the angel of the world."

I asked for details and got the story of the elder actress' first experiences in Hollywood, in "Quality Street."

Miss Hepburn became her coach and guardian on the set. The star is wise in matters of camera angles, ranges and lighting. Miss Bainter remembers many an early scene with Miss Hepburn in which the latter would whisper, "Turn your head—turn your head—you're cutting off your nose!"

Or, "Look up a little and wet your lips. Relax a little and wet your lips—WET YOUR LIPS! That looks much better."

Sometimes, when Miss Bainter was about to appear alone in a close-up, and when director and cameraman were satisfied with her position, Miss Hepburn would walk up, grasp her shoulders firmly, turn her a few degrees, and maybe tilt her head a little. In close shots including just the two actresses, Miss Hepburn usually wanted her protégé to get most of the camera.

The star wasn't supposed to work evenings, but the rest of the company sometimes had to. Miss Hepburn would return to the set, though, and sit on the sidelines. People would plead with her: "Katie, you're tired. Please go home and rest." "She'd say, 'No, maybe I can help Miss Bainter.' And she did."

The following incident is merely typical of Miss Hepburn's relations with the press. But the fact that she herself told the story of Miss Bainter, and with hilarious relish, is one of the things that makes her an unfathomable personality.

Beginning a vacation flight to the east, Miss Hepburn was indignant at the presence of a woman reporter on the same plane. Her grumblings were heard by all the passengers. The newspaperwoman said nothing. She said nothing until the plane had almost reached New York. By this time Miss Hepburn was beginning to have pangs of conscience, and impulsively she turned and called down the aisle: "Come over here and talk to me."

"No, thanks," said the gal reporter. "I'm on vacation, too."

THEATERS

At The New

Film detective fans, who pride themselves on solving screen mysteries before the cinema detective, will have one of the toughest jobs of their career when "Lady In The Morgue," another one of the famous Universal Crime Club mysteries comes to the New theater on Tuesday and Wednesday.

The audience is completely left in doubt until the end about the identity of the real killer, as it was in "The Black Doll," "The Westland Case," and other Crime Club thrillers, inasmuch as the plot has been woven so carefully as to practically defy solution of the mystery in advance. In addition to the clever plot manipulation, "The Lady In The Morgue" is packed to the hilt with vivid situations, fast action and sardonic humor.

Preston Foster heads the cast as "Bill Crane," private investigator who likes to bedevil the official police. Frank Jenks has the role of "Doc Williams," his wisecracking, rough and ready assistant. Tom Jackson is "Lieut. Stinson" and Morgan Wallace is "Inspector Laymon." Beautiful Patricia Ellis has the role of the mysterious brunette, about whom much of the mystery centers. Others important in the cast are Joseph Dowling, Al Hill, James Robbins, Stanley Price, Gordon Hart, Ronald Drew, Byron Foulger, Minerva Urecal and Gordon Elliott.

The picture tells of the theft of the body of a beautiful girl from the morgue before it can be identified. "Bill Crane" before it because he fears it may be that of a missing heiress. Rival gangsters want the body because they believe it is that of the wife of one of them. Wild scenes of adventure take place before the body is recovered. Even after this is done the case still seems far from solution until Crane suddenly gathers all the principals together and builds up a fool proof case against the guilty party.

Drouth Was Bad, Big Crop's Awful

Farmers to Receive Benefits for Sealing Crops Down

By PRESTON GROVER
WASHINGTON. — In 1936, drouth. The wheat crop went to pot, falling so low that some had to be imported. It was nature's random blow at crop control, said many farmers, half believing themselves.

Buckley-buckley all over the wheat belt arose opposition to further control and the lid was off in 1937. A remarkably good crop was harvested, and in spite of a carryover of 200,000,000 bushels, prices remained above the "dollar wheat level" through the fall and early winter of 1937-38.

As talk developed of new crop control machinery, farm delegations poured into Washington. No wheat quotas for 1938, they urged. Congress and the Department of Agriculture consented, although some able farmers and most specialists in the Department of Agriculture smelled trouble.

No restrictions were imposed on plantings for the 1938 harvest. As a result, 79,000,000 acres were seeded down to wheat, enough for a "calamity crop" of a billion bushels, with good growing weather. In mid-winter, prices began to sag. By the time Congress convened last January some farmers were jittery. By February, when the farm bill passed, wheat had sealed off to 80 cents a bushel. It was already too late to control the 1938 winter wheat, planted the previous fall. All Congress could do was to promise continued benefit payments to induce farmers to accept some control of the 1939 crop.

Big Crop, Low Price
Here is the situation. Normally the U. S. eats 650,000,000 bushels of wheat, exports another 100,000,000 and carries over in bins and elevators an additional one or two million. But this year a billion bushel crop is in sight which, coupled with 200,000,000 carried over from 1937, has at times put the market down as low as 70 cents a bushel, although it is higher now.

Under strict terms of the crop control act, wheat farmers expecting to share any further federal benefits would have to agree to cut their acreage almost in half next year, from this year's 79 million to 46 million acres. Neither Congress nor the Department wanted that job, especially in the present election year.

To remove part of the sting, Congress provided just before adjournment that the acreage should not be cut below 55 million. Even with that, the country faces another harvest that may put 10 bushels of wheat in every pot and a stack of it in every garage. Instead of 600,000,000 to carry over to next year the country appears likely to have 470,000,000 bushels to carry over. That is well over half the national needs for a year.

Some bright spots are:
1—The prospect of 1938 crop reductions by rust.
2—Slack crops in parts of Europe. (Note—a billion bushel crop in 1935 brought whopping profits because of the war.)

"Benefits" to Farmers
How is the Department to persuade farmers to seal down their 1939 acreage?

First—Farmers who comply with crop control regulations get 12 to 15 cents a bushel in "benefits" on a "normal acreage." That normal acreage is determined by what the farmer has grown in the past and what Department experts think he should raise in the future if he is to farm well and conserve his soil.

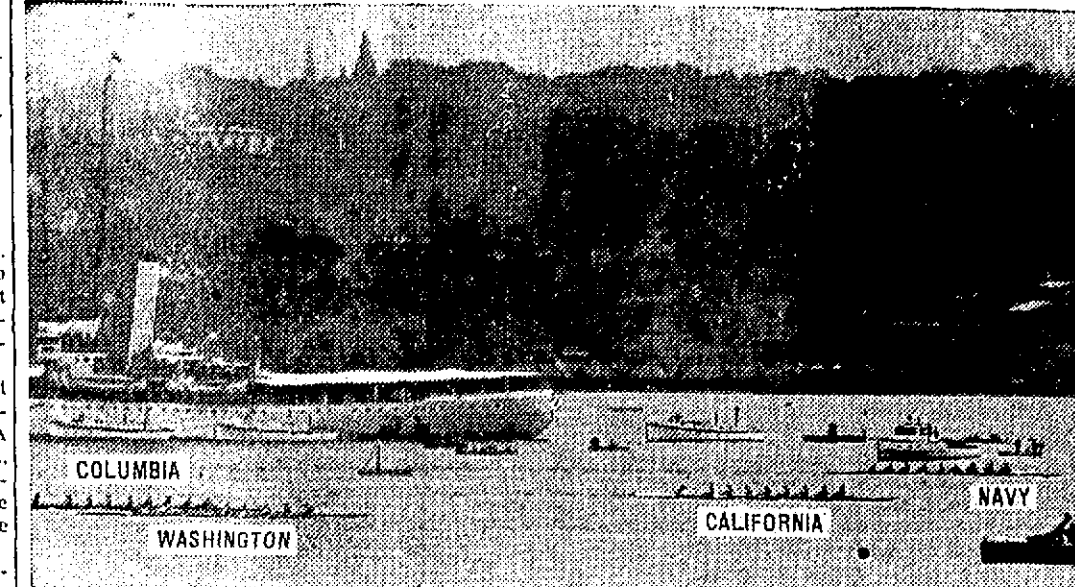

Second—In addition to "benefits," complying farmers may expect eight cents a bushel on their "normal" 1939 crop. That is from the subsidy voted by Congress near the end of the session.

Third—By a system of loans the farmer will be guaranteed a minimum of 60 to 86 cents a bushel on his 1939 crop if it becomes necessary for the government to store the surplus.

Altogether the crop control job stacks up as a painful operation. It starts July 15, five days after the Department learns for sure just how big the billion bushel crop really is to be.

bombing.

Johnson denounced the proposed study as an effort to have the senate draw conclusions about the war in the Orient. With that, he said, "we would be on the way to the war."

Senator Clark of Missouri, who joined the two "elders" when the bill was debated, called it "snug hypocrisy" to condemn bombing at the same time the country continues at permit bombs, planes and war materials to be shipped to the "certain Oriental nations" responsible for the bombings.

Critics argue that in the same hour the administration dials harshly with dictator nations with one hand it makes palliative gestures toward them with the other. The State Department and its defenders refuse to accept any such interpretation of the policy and only recently a careful analysis by skilled observers indicated that the department's policy is designed to "keep the aggressor nations guessing."

Elder Statesman Against Policy

Isolation or a Firmer Foreign Policy for U. S. Discussed

By PRESTON GROVER

WASHINGTON — There is such downright opposition among some of the "elder statesmen" to the administration's foreign policy that the attempt made to get the senate to endorse even its criticism of civilian bombing was all but snowed under. Few in the senate doubted that Chairman Pittman of the Senate foreign relations committee was working in close cooperation with the State Department when he introduced a resolution proposing to "approve of the sentiments expressed by the Secretary of State" in denouncing bombing of civilian populations.

To Secretary Hull it would have been valuable as lending senatorial weight to his recognized efforts to bring aggressor nations to heel. Two Senate elder statesmen, Borah of Idaho and Johnson of California, opposed the first draft of the resolution on two grounds, first, that it endorsed a "foreign meddling" gesture of the State Department, and second, that it called for a senate study of "what action may be taken by the congress tending toward the cessation of the practice of bombing civilian populations."

They Condemned It
The first draft of 150 words was trimmed to 600 words after the two senators had a go at it in the foreign relations committee. All reference to the State Department was knocked out and before debate finished even the proposed "study" of bombing problems was eliminated, leaving a mere 15-word condemnation of civilian

STORIES IN STAMPS

Salvador Bows to U. S. Constitution

ZEALOUSLY guarding her independence since she separated from Spain with the other countries of Central America on Sept. 15, 1821, Salvador holds great faith in the democratic form of government. So it now joins the growing list of nations issuing special postage stamps to mark the 150th anniversary of one of the greatest experiments in democracy, the United States Constitution.

The present constitution of Salvador was promulgated Aug. 13, 1886, and provides for three divisions of government. The legislative function is invested in a congress of a single chamber. Voting is obligatory on every male citizen of 18 years or over. The president and vice president are elected by popular vote for four-year terms, and may not succeed themselves for the ensuing term. The judiciary is composed of a supreme court, one court of third instance, and several of first and second instance. Salvador is divided into 14 departments, presided over by governors appointed by the president for terms of four years.

The independent history of Salvador has been marked by a number of revolutions and by wars between the Central American countries. The Salvador Constitution commemorative, multi-colored, reproduced above.

Little Rock Drops 2 to Chattanooga

Memphis Celebrates With Double Victory Over Atlanta

LITTLE ROCK—(AP)—Rogers Hornsby's revived Chattanooga Lookouts took a double-header from the Little Rock Travelers, 4 to 3, and 8 to 7, at Travelers Field Monday night. The Travelers outthrew the winners, 10 to 7, in the first game but were unable to launch their hits off the veteran Dick Lannahan.

The Lookouts took an early lead in the second. A seven-run rally, climaxed by Bill Nagel's home run over the left field fence in the sixth inning, fell one run short of a tie for the home club.

Vols Whip Pels
NEW ORLEANS—(AP)—Nashville's Volunteers snapped the winning streak of the New Orleans Pelicans abruptly Monday by taking both ends of a doubleheader, 3 to 0 and 5 to 4.

"Jelly" Collier shut out the Pels in the opener. The Vols scored all of their runs off Russell "Red" Evans in the first inning. An error by Michael, who dropped a throw from Schilling, paved the way for the tallies.

In the finale Johnson, a southpaw, pitched shutout ball against New Orleans for five innings. Lynn Watkins took the hill after a Pelican uprising and stopped them.

First game:
Nashville..... 300 000 000—3 7 0
New Orleans..... 000 000 000—0 8 2

Second game:
Nashville..... 020 101 2—6 9 1
New Orleans..... 000 003 1—4 8 3

Chicks Take Two
MEMPHIS, Tenn.—(AP)—The Memphis Chicks celebrated the fourth with a barrage of base hits Monday, taking both ends of a doubleheader from the league-leading Atlanta Crackers, 6-4, 6-2.

In the opener, Memphis got off to a five-run lead in the first inning on three hits, two bases on balls and a double steal. Chick Pitcher Ed Hueser kept the Atlanta hits well scattered until the ninth when the Crackers filled the bases. Kip Sauerbrun, who relieved Hueser, at this stage, chilled the rally by forcing Hill to fly out.

Buddy Bates, Memphis centerfielder, broke a 2-2 deadlock early in the second game when he hammered out a homer with one aboard.

First game:
Atlanta..... 030 100 210—4 11 1
Memphis..... 500 000 10x—6 6 3

Second game:

Barons Defeat Smokies
BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—(AP)—Sparked by the pitching and hitting of their lefthander, Bill Yoeke, the Barons defeated Knoxville 11 to 4, in the first game of a fourth of July afternoon night program.

The elongated southpaw yielded 15 hits but kept them well scattered. He hit a home run with two on in the second to clinch his victory.

Afternoon game:

Birmingham..... 142 030 01x—11 18 1

WHEN YOU WERE SWEET SIXTEEN
By James Thornton

JIM THORNTON was a singing wa-back, when the mauve decade was fairly rosy.

"FROM ME, I LOVE YOU NOW JUST AS I DID WHEN YOU WERE SWEET SIXTEEN—"

"WHAT A TITLE FOR A SONG"

The idea for the song remained with Jim, and for nearly a year he rounded out the lyrics and developed the melody.

Their vaudeville tour had brought them to San Francisco before Jim had completed the song, and he brought it in glee to his partner-wife.

Bonnie sang the song at the Orpheum Theatre the next night, and it has since remained through the years in the memories of old timers, with other "heart songs".

Jim Thornton was elected to membership in the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers in the later years of his career, the popularity of his works requiring official sanction and protection.
